

Newsletter Ed. October 2019

Don't miss our first GBM of the year tomorrow!

Come to our first GBM of the year and learn what CSSA is all about and how YOU can get involved and join us as a general member, volunteer, or even a committee member! There will be free food (Chipotle) too, so mark your calendars for Thursday, 10/10 from 5-8 p.m. at Price Center Theater. We hope to see you there!

What's new in the Cog-Sci world?

Can Cognitive Science show that culture shapes personality traits?

"That's the question Smaldino is exploring with collaborators from UC Santa Barbara, California State University Fullerton and the University of Richmond. Their research, published in the journal Nature Human Behaviour, suggests societies differ in the personality profiles of their members because of the different sociological niches in those societies. The diverse niches in a society — the occupational, social and other ways people navigate through daily life — constrain how
